"Senator" Davenport

Dr. Davenport has just come out of the woods with the definite announcement of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for State Senator. This is not altogether an unmixed surprise to his friends, many of whom have expressed their opinion that Dr. Davenport would accept the nomination. His own announcement of his candidacy comes as authoritative confirmation of a report which has been gathering weight throughout the State and which has obtained credence at the hands of the people for several months.

Dr. Davenport, when asked to make a statement concerning the rival candidacy of Assemblyman Hart, said, "I think it has been generally known for some time that we were both receptive, if not active, candidates. I see no reason, however, why there should be anything but a generous and straightforward rivalry between us for an office which is at once an honor and an honorable opportunity for public service."

To all who know Dr. Davenport this sentiment will appeal as a characteristic expression of his fair-mindedness and straightforward dealing. Nor are these the only qualities which have so endeared Dr. Davenport to the student body and all others who have the privilege of his acquaintance. His cordiality and hearty friendship have won for him loyal supporters in every walk of life.

His peculiar fitness for the position of State Senator is self-apparent. A recognized authority on public and political questions, he would bring to the office a wealth of knowledge and experience that would be invaluable. His forensic powers are too well known to need further mention. A debater par excellence, an orator of eloquent and forceful manner, he rises infinitely superior to the ordinary political "spellbinder." Much favorable comment has been attached to his name through his being called to advise with President Roosevelt upon economic problems. A series of lectures, but lately completed, upon the "Railway as a Political Problem" have been received with unbounded favor and have stamped him as an eminent authority upon political problems. His work in the College has never been hampered by his numerous other activities, but has always been regarded as one of the best courses which is offered on the Hill.

He is undoubtedly a strong candidate. Ultimate election may be, unfortunately, a matter of political wire-pulling. It would seem that otherwise Dr. Davenport could not fail of his ambition. Hamilton men regard his candidacy with unbounded approval. It goes without saying that they will do all in their power to help the newly-launched Davenport boom. State Senator Davenport! It has a good sound.

Cornell Wins

Last Friday night the Varsity was defeated at Ithaca by the fast Cornell team by the score of 55-25. Although the team was outclassed, it by no means played the game of which it is capable. This was because of the lack of team work due to the fact that the men who wore the Buff and Blue uniform that night played together as a team for the first time. Wilson and Welch were not allowed to take the trip and although Bate and Getman played well, they lacked the experience of the other men. Cornell has a fast team as is shown by the fact that they recently defeated Rochester 58-9. The team, handicapped though it was, did not play up to standard. The men were erratic and lacked the fast, consistent work which is necessary to win basketball games. At times they played brilliantly but at other times, the less said the better. At first it looked like a Hamilton day for we scored twice before Cornell saw the ball. Then the pace slackened and the "big red team" rapidly took the lead. There were no stars on the Hamilton team, although Allen had a good eye for fouls and Sherwin played his man well. For Cornell Crosby was easily the best player. The work of the team at Ithaca was the work largely of a substitute team. We expect differently at Rochester tonight.

The line up follows:

CORNELL 55.		HAMILTON 25.
	Right Forward	Allen
Avery (Capt.)	Left Forward	Getman
Crosby	Center	Sherwin
Burd	Right Guard	Roenke
Phelps (Whitney)
Goals — Avery 3, Crosby 12, Shero 2, Burd 2, Phelps 5, Simpson, Allen 2, Sherwin 4, Roenke 4. Fouls — Burd 5, Allen 5. Referee—Gilbert, of Auburn; Umpire, G. B. Smith, '08. Timer—Leonard, Cornell, '08. Time of halves—20 minutes.

Rochester Game

The Varsity will meet the strong Rochester team this evening on the latter's floor in the fourth game of the season. The Rochester team won from Yale a short time ago by one point. Later Cornell defeated them decisively. They beat Williams by the score of 23-9. Without saying any more concerning this team, it is evident that the Varsity will be tested to the limit. The line up of the team will be: Welch, '09, and Allen, '11, forwards, Sherwin, '10, center, Roenke and Wilson, '09, guards. These men have been practicing faithfully all week, and are determined to wipe out our football defeat of last fall.

Every man in College is back of the team, and if the men fulfill our expectations, another victory will be added on the schedule of 1908.

Prof. Fitch Lectures

Prof. Fitch spoke at the Kirkland Town Library Monday evening on "Homer as a Dramatist." The lecture was the third of a series of entertainments which are being given for the benefit of the Library and was attended by a large and appreciative audience. A brief outline of the lecture follows:

Homer is usually classed as an epic or narrative poet, but the Iliad and Odyssey are not merely narrative poems. They have a pronounced dramatic strain. In them each character speaks and the poet tells his story by introducing his characters and making them speak in their own person. This dramatic style of narrative is not peculiar to Homer, but is found in early literature generally as in the Old Testament. In addition, Homer is dramatic in that he displays the power of constructing a plot. This power is strikingly shown in the second half of the Odyssey. Here we find the story developed in true dramatic fashion and in such a way as to conform closely to the rules which Aristotle, the first writer on the theory of poetry, deduced from the Greek tragedies that were written long after the time of Homer. This drama might be entitled, "The Beggar."

Prof. Fitch then illustrated his remarks by dividing the narrative into five acts and by applying to it dramatic principles. In presenting this Homeric drama, he used as the dialogue the speeches that are actually found in the Odyssey. His stage directions, giving the scenery and the place, were taken from the descriptive parts of the poem. He showed that even in this brief form, all the essentials of a drama are to be recognized in this ancient epic poem.

Dr. Davenport Speaks

The sixth and final lecture in Prof. Davenport's course at the Auditorium was delivered Tuesday evening before the New Century Club, on the timely and important topic, "The Government Ownership of Railways." The series of discussions have been unusually interesting and instructive, and it was with regret that his large audience reached the end of the course.

We have already had in our history, he said, quite a number of examples of State ownership and operation of railways, and everywhere the experience was the same—failure, bitter and complete. But if you can get an effective social control instead of ownership and operation, then you get a double advantage for the public. You enable the business to remain in private hands and get the undoubted benefit of free individual initiative, and at the same time you safeguard the interests of the public. You have one force as a check on the other, public initiative watching private initiative and private initiative securing better productive results than public initiative. Where you can get effective social control in a complex industry, the burden of proof is on those who demand government ownership.

We have in the railway industry a perfectly immense capital outlay and the most complex capital accounting. It is the most complex business in the country and requires men of the greatest ability to run it successfully. We have very few such men in the public service who could handle the railways effectively under government ownership and operation.

And there is a political argument looking in the same direction. We have by no means, in this country, yet, a thorough civil service system, and a million or two of government railway employees would be sure to introduce a great deal of political demoralization. Then, too, if congress undertook the political fixing of rates as it now undertakes the political fixing of tariff schedules, we should have an orgy of corruption and injustice, hitherto unequaled. And if we had government railways, most of the agitation in Congress would be taken up with the demands of this section and that section, of this interest or that interest.

And the fiscal danger would not be small. The revenues and expenditures of the railways are far greater than those of the entire government of the United States. If we had government railways, the whole financial budget would be controlled by the interests of the railway service.

Prof. Davenport then showed the difference between the situation in Germany and in America. The genius of America, he said, looks in the direction of private initiative and not public. It would ill-betide America, if this splendid tendency toward self-reliance and independence in industry, were broken down.

The error made by the advocates of State ownership and management is that they fail to see that the public interests may be justly and adequately provided for by State regulation and supervision and sharing of the profits, as well as by State ownership and operation.

In concluding Prof. Davenport said that government ownership and operations are certain to come and that right speedily, if the effort at effective social control shall fail. If we would avoid this blow at private initiative which has been the glory and strength of America, the people must see to it that the reactionaries in politics, in both parties, are not allowed to get back into the saddle. The progressive Democratic policies which are ruling the thought of the progressive leaders in both parties must be allowed to proceed. The people of America are just now engaged in a great enterprise, namely, the drawing of the fangs of special privilege and a fuller democratization of the business of the Nation. That is what is going on and no human hand can stay it.

THE SYSTEM OF ELECTION to assistant managerships of athletic activities which is now in force is an excellent one. But it discloses a flaw here and there. In their eagerness to secure election, candidates are often led to take long trips with the teams. There is certainly no harm in this practice in itself. The danger is that it may become a requirement for assistant managerships. This would be a harmful precedent to establish. Many men cannot afford either the time or the money required to make extended trips. A wise precaution would be to forbid this practice, or else to discourage it by refusing to count such work, when the election takes place.

WE ARE GLAD to note that Junior Prom. is to begin at nine o'clock, instead of at ten as in former years, but why does the committee stick to the time-worn tradition of forty dances? It must be on account of tradition or precedent, for there is no other good reason. We venture to say that there is not a man in College, whose happiness would be in any degree lessened, if the Prom. were cut down to thirty dances. Further, we are certain that many would welcome the change. Why forty dances? That "all gone, but still game" feeling may be the proper thing for the last few minutes of an athletic contest, but it certainly does not befit a man presumably anxious to enjoy himself and appear at his best. Surely the girls themselves do not wish for the longer time. Prolonged dancing Thursday night, detracts materially from the enjoyment of the Friday night dances. Then, too, coasting, one of the most delightful phases of the Junior Week, is not given a fair chance, because no one can dance all night, coast all day, and enjoy both.

To be brief and to the point, let's be safe and sane. Everyone attends at least two other dances in the week, so why not shorten the Prom. itself and thereby lessen, in a degree, that "morn'ing after" feeling.

ALTHOUGH IT MAY SEEM to some to be a long time before the next football season, yet this time of year while blizzards are blowing on the Hill, and the field is buried beneath the beautiful snow, is the very time to think about and make plans for the season of 1908. And one plan suggests itself to us as being an excellent scheme: that of having spring football practice. It is an established feature of athletic work at Yale and Princeton and in the fall gives a team a start of two or three weeks over an opponent organizing for the season with the opening of college.

Last September several weeks' work was lost, or at least counted for little, while Coach Crook was getting a line on the material with which he had to work.

A great deal of this sifting process and pigeon-holing of men could just as well be done in the spring and an estimate of the scrub, who this year were unable to make the team, be obtained. Of course no team could be picked or definite conclusions arrived at until scrimmage work began in the fall and the incoming Freshman class tried out, but it would do away with a lot of preliminary work that always causes delays and takes up valuable time during the actual season when that time is most needed for something else. Another advantage of spring practice would be that of individual coaching, little of which can be done in the fall. The back field men would be worked out in punting, drop-kicking and in handling the forward pass while the line men would be coached in starts, and with a tackling dummy, a piece of apparatus very much needed, work could be started along that line also.

Undoubtedly Prof. Sherman or Prof. Sicard could be prevailed upon to take charge of the work and the ball set rolling for the season of 1908 in May instead of September.

The Intercollegiate Debate

An intercollegiate debate, so long talked of, has at last been proposed. Arrangements have been made to debate with Union, at Schenectady, on March 11th. The proposition has not yet been decided, but it has been agreed that we propose the subject, and Union have choice of the side.

It has not been definitely settled who will speak for Hamilton, but it is very probable that a team will be picked from among the men who appeared best in the interclass debate.

This news will be heard with great pleasure by the College. For some time this department of college activities has been dormant. The last intercollegiate debate was held in 1906 with the College of the City of New York. It has been the opinion of the college in general that this lack of activity in contests for which we are so fitted, should not exist. In football and basketball the Garnet teams have been defeated by the Buff and Blue. LIFE hopes that we will be just as successful in this coming contest, and that another laurel will be added to "Carissima's crown."

Practice for Relay Race

Announcement was made early in the week that Hamilton would accept the invitation of R. P. I. to participate in the Troy Athletic Carnival to be held in that city on Feb. 26. Capt. Smith immediately called out men for practice and about twelve responded. Probably the only event which the team will contend for will be the mile relay race and consequently the men are now doing the quarter-mile. If enough good material develops to take Capt. Smith's place on the relay team he may enter the mile run.

The prospects so far are exceedingly bright. Union and R. P. I. will be the only teams to oppose us in the race and the interest that is already being manifested is encouraging to the management.

The men already out for the team are: Capt. Smith, Babcock, Spencer, Renwick, Knox, Stube, Engs, Colson, Mitchell, Peters and Willard.

Practice is held every afternoon at 4 o'clock. Everybody out.

Oration Awards

Last Monday morning Dr. Stryker announced in chapel the awards of the mid-winter orations. They follow:

The Forty-sixth Pruyn Medal Oration, "Enemies of Democracy," to Paul Benjamin Williams, of Albion.

The Forty-fifth Head Prize Oration, "Alexander Hamilton, the Man," to Frank Townsend Laird, of Utica.

The Thirty-fifth Kirkland Prize Oration, "The Moral Value of Ecclesiastes," to Harry William Smith, of Waterford.

The foundation of $500, by the late Chancellor John V. L. Pruyn, of Albany, furnishes a gold medal for the Senior writing the best oration on the "Political Duties of Educated Young Men."

The foundation of $1,000, by the Hon. Franklin D. Head, LL. D., '56, of Chicago, Ill., furnishes a prize for the Senior writing the best oration upon "Alexander Hamilton."

The foundation of $500, by the late Mrs. A. R. Kirkland, of Clinton, furnishes a prize for the Senior writing the best oration upon a theme in "Biblical Science."

These prizes carry with them appointments to the Commencement stage.

Football Rules

The football rules this spring will be remodeled by practically the same committee that has acted in the past two years. Five of the larger colleges will send representatives to act with the committeemen elected by the Intercollegiate Association of the United States. The first meetings of the committee to revise the rules are being held in New York. It is realized that some of the rules as they now stand have not met with satisfaction in all quarters. Particularly has the forward pass been made the subject of considerable discussion. The principal criticism of this feature of the new game seems to come from the so-called larger colleges.

It is this rule more than any other which gives the light, versatile teams of the smaller colleges a possible chance to score on and win from heavier and physically more powerful opponents.

During the fall the uses of the forward pass have been greatly developed and in some cases overdeveloped. Some of the larger teams, not realizing its dangers, particularly in the early season, presented a defense much along old lines and inadequate to meet the requirements of the new game. As time and experience make the possibilities of this feature of football better known the defense will develop to meet it.

It is believed by the majority of the committee that the forward pass is an important feature of the present game, and that whereas it may be subjected to slight modification it will not be eliminated or changed in its essentials.

Junior Whist

Junior Whist was entertained Wednesday night by Delta Upsilon. Most of the class were on hand and yet there was a rumor that long history reports were the cause of the absence of some. The debate team came in late and was appropriately received. Whist was the game of the evening. About half-past ten a luncheon was served. After a sing, the party broke up with a yell for the hosts.

Dramatics

On Thursday afternoon of Junior Week, February 27th, the Dramatic Club will present a two-act and a one-act comedy. It will be at Scollard Opera House, Clinton, with the following as cast:

The Musical Clubs

The Musical Clubs are hard at work, rounding the program into shape preparatory to their annual northern trip. The 1908 "Tutti Frutti" and encore, written by Purdy, '06, are taking the entire attention of the Glee Club, while the Instrumental Club expect to have "The Merry Widow Waltz" in shape before they start. It has not yet been decided whether both clubs will take part in the "Tutti Frutti," or not. If possible, they will work it up together later in the season.

On the northern trip four concerts will be given, instead of three as heretofore. The clubs will appear in Camden on Feb. 5th, under the auspices of the Camden High School. The next two concerts will be given at Watertown and Lowville, on Feb. 6th and 7th, respectively, and will be financed by the management. On Saturday night, Feb. 8th, the last concert will be given at Boonville, under the auspices of the Boonville High School. A more admirable trip could not have been planned. In every one of the above places, Alumni or interested persons are making ample preparations for the entertainment of the men, and a pleasant trip is assured.

The Tuesday after their return, the clubs will appear in Rome. This concert also will be financed by the management, and every man in College is urged to attend. Everyone purchasing a ticket before the third of February will be given free transportation to and from Rome.
